

District-Charter Collaboration Compacts Robin Lake Parker Baxter

"The goal of the compact initiative is to improve collaboration and innovation between charter and districts schools to provide all students in a city with a portfolio of highly effective education options, accelerating 80 percent college readiness in the city."

- Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation

Charters need to start thinking about the long-term implications of their model. If they want to be a dominant player, they can't only admit students in a certain grade and reject mid year transfers.

Superintendent

The district has a great teacher evaluation system that we would love to learn from. We've been pioneering performance pay and think we have a lot to share in that area. We just need to come together.

Charter Leader

Purpose

- Fundamentally shift the districtcharter dynamic
- Transform the systems and incentive structures that foster unhealthy competition
- Tackle the most intractable challenges to collaboration

 Ensure a level playing field for all students (move toward portfolio management model)

Objectives

- Encourage both sectors to share resources, responsibilities
- Disseminate high-potential ideas for collaboration, innovation, and student achievement
- Create a structure to build trust, enable leading cities to push each other, set a new bar center on reinventing public education

crpe.org | UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON

District-Charter Collaboration Compact Student enrollment breakdown in Cohort 1 cities

	Traditional	Charter			Total
New Orleans	39% 61%				36,816
Minneapolis	78%		22%		44,403
Baltimore		90%		10%	82,866
Los Angeles		90%		10%	678,277
Denver		90%	, y	10%	77,255
Rochester	93%			7%	36,389
Hartford	96%			4%	22,018
New York	97%			3%	999,315
Nashville		98%		2%	80,080
				Sc	ource: NAPCS

center on reinventing public education

crpe.org | UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON

 Track progress of, and provide support to, each compact site

CRPE's Role

- Facilitate problem-solving sessions and networking opportunities
- Identify important compact breakthroughs and barriers
- Report on implementation across compacts, including analysis of local contexts and policies

Competition Paradigm

- Autonomous schools seen as resource drain, threat to job and control
- Central office runs all schools
- Resources hoarded for districtmanaged schools

Collaboration Paradigm

- Autonomous schools are seen as assets, collaborators
- District's job is service provider, monitor of quality
- Resources shared, follow students

Each city is pursuing different types of collaboration

- I. Sharing Best Practices
- II. Sharing Resources
- III. Sharing Responsibility

District-Charter Collaboration Compact Compacts cover broad topics

Equity and Access

Financial Resources

Advocacy and policyshaping

Facilities

School accountability

Teacher and principal effectiveness

Sample Commitments from Cohort 1

- A joint district-charter initiative created a template for how teachers can develop and refine detailed year-long plans. The templates, and other materials are now available more broadly. -Washington D.C.
- 2 charter and 1 district middle school share a common enrollment zone, and every student living within the zone is guaranteed a spot at one of the schools. –Denver
- A campus with a co-located district and charter school are piloting an active collaboration partnership.

 Students share lunch and recess and joint staff meetings will be held throughout the year. –Los Angeles

"But both supporters and skeptics... agree that so far the [district-charter] cooperative efforts are not widespread nor are most of them very deep"

Education Week November 18, 2010

To Share or Not to Share... (e.g., Denver)

- Voter-approved bond funds
- Title III Grant Funds (federal grant funding for ELLs)
- Foundation X grant for teacher-effectiveness
- Flu-preparedness kits
- Technology funding
- Special education funding

Compact Offers Opportunity to Shift Tone and Substance

Look, we've had a combative history with charters, but today we are setting a new expectation for collaboration and that high-quality education be delivered to all students in the city – whether through a traditional or charter school.

District Leader

Seeing the Superintendent at the table in this effort made a huge impact on our commitment. We recognize the risk the district is taking on and it's up to all of us to make this work.

- Charter Leader